DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Claims 17-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter.

Claims 17-20 are drawn to a "program" per se as recited in the preamble and as such is non-statutory subject matter. See MPEP § 2106.IV.B.1.a. Data structures not claimed as embodied in computer readable media are descriptive material per se and are not statutory because they are not capable of causing functional change in the computer. See, e.g., Warmerdam, 33 F.3d at 1361, 31 USPQ2d at 1760 (claim to a data structure per se held nonstatutory). Such claimed data structures do not define any structural and functional interrelationships between the data structure and other claimed aspects of the invention, which permit the data structure's functionality to be realized. In contrast, a claimed computer readable medium encoded with a data structure defines structural and functional interrelationships between the data structure and the computer software and hardware components which permit the data structure's functionality to be realized, and is thus statutory. Similarly, computer programs claimed as computer listings per se, i.e., the descriptions or expressions of the programs are not physical "things." They are neither computer components nor statutory processes, as they are not "acts" being performed. Such claimed computer programs do not define any structural and functional interrelationships between the computer program and other claimed elements of a computer, which permit the computer program's functionality to be realized.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 11-16 are allowed.

The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter:

The prior art of record alone or in combination does not teach or suggest the information recording apparatus and method having the combination of elements and steps with their recited structure, functions and process, along with controlling said writing device to write first border information or second border information with a smaller recording capacity than that of the first border information, at an end of the record information recorded into one recording layer of the plurality of recording layers; and detecting a spare capacity of a data area of the one recording layer, the controlling device controlling said writing device to write the first border information at the end if the detected spare capacity is equal to or greater than a first threshold value, and controlling said writing device to write all or part of the second border information between (i) the end and (ii) a start position of a middle area formed on an outer circumference side of the data area if the detected spare capacity is less than the first threshold value, as set forth in claims 11-16.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Weijenbergh et al. (7,082,092), Suh (7,260,039) and Numata et al. (6,631,106), all disclose a recording and reproducing device capable of controlling the writing of information around the buffer or border areas on the recording medium.
